Innovation, energy security & the Norfolk Zone

In our April e-news, we highlighted how Vattenfall's Norfolk projects are seeking to use the very latest offshore wind technology innovation, to further reduce the cost to the consumer of the energy produced, and optimise the zone's contribution to UK energy security, in line with government policy. To allow this, we are applying to make a non-material change to our Development Consent Orders for Norfolk Boreas and Norfolk Vanguard, namely, removal of the maximum export capacity limit. The projects will do this within our consented design envelope, with no change to the projects' onshore elements. Having already applied for a non-material change in relation to Norfolk Boreas, we will submit a very similar application in relation to the Norfolk Vanguard project. Both applications will be determined by the Secretary of State for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy.
